Tiramara, fully known as the Command of Tiramara and in English known as the Maritimes, is a large kingdom located east of Quebec and north of the Gothic and Salemite New England tribes. The kingdom has a long and detailed history stretching back to the 2200s (the first founders are said to have been born in the 1800s; this is unreliable). Tiramara is very religiously diverse, being a home to Rememberants, Mervivants, Fogsongs, and even the Fathomless Occultery.

History of Tiramara

The earliest known kings of Tiramara were from the Irving dynasty. According to the title history, the first Irvings were born in the 1800s, but this should be considered unreliable as nobody can live for at least 200 years. The first known Irvings whose lifespans can be considered legitimate were Petromancers. As Tiramara is an elective monarchy, people of many different dynasties have ruled, and some dynasties have come and gone in terms of power. The majority of rulers have been Rememberants, while some have been Mervivants. Two maritime families, the Beatons of Halifax and the Irvings of New Brunswick, have clashed with each other for centuries. There are some cases where the Beatons and Irvings have massacred each other, such as on November 11, 2600.

Religion in Tiramara

The vast majority of counties in Tiramara are of the Legion of Rememberance, a religion that strongly believes that the Event was something known as the War to End All, where Jesus had resurrected into as a soldier and was killed there. The Legion of Rememberance is one of three Veteranic faiths, which can be found as far west as Ontario. Other religions in Tiramara include Le Cycle du Mervivant, which can be most commonly found amongst Acadians such as the Corbeau family of Miramichi. There is also a pocket of Mervivants in Annapolis Valley and Digby. There is also the Fathomless Occultery in St. Croix and the Grove of the Fog Songs in the far north of the kingdom. The Nnu A'sutmamg, a Mi'kmaw faith which has elements of Christianity, is also present but nearly all of the religion's counties are part of an independent realm known as the Sante'Mawio'mi. Nnu A'sutmamg people have been elected as the kings of Tiramara in the past.

Culture in Tiramara

Most of Tiramara is culturally Maritimer, which is based off the Anglophone cultures of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. There are Acadians in the west as well as a small piece of the Nova Scotian coast, as well as the Chiac culture which can be found in just Chiac County. The Gaidheal culture is dominant in eastern Nova Scotia, and the current queen of Tiramara is of that culture. Based on the title history, Tiramara once held parts of Newfoundland in the past, meaning that the Newfie culture was once present in Tiramara.
